FILM SYNOPSIS

Two intrepid internet ghost hunters travel to a ranch purportedly haunted by a gold-rush era Chinese prostitute. As their friendship rapidly deteriorates, a dark secret about one of the hunters' connection to the case comes to light.

ABOUT THE FILM

THE FALLEN WOMAN is a creative collaboration of Asian American filmmakers Willis Chung, Ben Tan, and Jennifer Zhang, who are unflinchingly committed to telling stories that explore -- and reveal -- the human condition.

While the premise and the “found footage” format of THE FALLEN WOMAN is meant to thrill and intrigue, woven throughout the plot are historically accurate details about the horrific ways young Chinese women were commoditized in the 1800s and early 1900s.

DIRECTOR'S BIOGRAPHY

Featured in “Deadline” in 2021 for her ambitious solo-effort film, “Charon,” hitting the Cannes film market, Jennifer Zhang has emerged as an Asian American filmmaker to watch. Momentum in her career has only mounted since, with her Oscar-qualified short film “Fetish” winning the Panavision-sponsored grand prize at the prestigious Micheaux Film Festival, her short film “Autopilot” set to world premiere at CAAMFest, and THE FALLEN WOMAN already been officially selected for the Oscar-qualifying Los Angeles Asian Pacific Film Festival. Jennifer is slated to begin production on her third feature, Truebadour [sic] this in 2023.

..... DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

While my focus is always to entertain, the ways in which we dehumanize each other is a theme I'm compelled to explore in most of my storytelling. Much of the darkness of THE FALLEN WOMAN pivots on a piece of long-buried, shameful history from America's Old West being dragged into the light.
